There are consoling features about the defection of the Louisville goldbugs. The vote for Hardin will fix the representation for the next State Convention and the gold advocates who scratch Hardin will not be on hand to give further trouble next year when the real fight comes on. If the Louisville vote drops from 18,000 to 10,000 it simply means that Louisville will have 50 instead of 90 votes in future conventions. Just to that extent will this hole of corruption be deprived of power to injure the Democratic party and sell out its long established principles. Let the bolters do their worst and still the Democratic ticket will win. The country is aroused and the Democrats of Kentucky will do their duty like men. The country will increase its vote beyond all precedents and it would not surprise us to see Hardin lead the ticket. He will do it in this county and unless we are very much mistaken Christian county will have at least 15 votes in future conventions, instead of 12 as at present.

The Grand Rivers Herald submits this as its guess on the judicial race: "To make an estimate of the probable vote in the third district we would say that Judge Linn would get a majority of 1150 in Calloway, Lyon 275, and Trigg by 225, making a total of 1650. Breathitt would get a majority of 1350 in Christian, giving Linn a net majority of 300 votes. It is not probable that there will be a full vote, and the chances are more in Judge Breathitt's favor on this account. Democracy is quiet and Republicanism is rampant in the district. It looks, however, as if any changes from the above votes are made they will be favorable to Judge Linn and unfavorable to his opponent."

These figures are far from a correct estimate. Lyon is probably about right, but Trigg will give at least 400, while Breathitt will have to run 500 votes ahead of his ticket to get 1,200 in Christian county. Breathitt will not go to Calloway with more than 600 majority, which ought to be easily overcome.

The Louisville Democrats opened the city campaign with a big rally at Phoenix Hill last Thursday night. Col. Breckinridge was the principal speaker and he made an eloquent plea for the whole ticket. That the Democrats are getting into better shape in Louisville is shown by the fact that the Republicans have lowered their claims from 10,000 to 3,500 in the city, and many Democrats even hope to carry the city for Hardin.

As foretold in our last issue, the Republicans have taken advantage of the prohibition excitement to nominate a mixed ticket, adjusted to suit the supposed opposition to the Democratic nominees. In the first and seventh wards, where the Democratic nominees did not avow themselves as prohibitionists, they have nominated ultra prohibitionists, and in the third and fourth wards where the Democratic nominees are prohibitionists, they have selected men understood to be on the opposite side of the question. They think they see an opportunity to profit by the stupidity of Democrats and capture a majority of the councilmen. We believe when the Democrats see into this scheme they will go a little slow in their efforts to mix up politics with prohibition. Those who were deluded into signing the petition of a Republican nominee, will probably keep both of their eyes open in the future.

The Duke of Marlborough, who has come to this country to trade his title for Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt's millions, seems to be something of a high roller and red painter. While in Louisville last week, according to the Star, he took in a limb show at the "Buck," and had to be ejected from the wings, where he had gone in an attempt to make the acquaintance of one of the dancing girls. After being put out like any ordinary youngster, he got in a hack and made a trip to the red-light district. Now comes the news that he has been arrested in New York for violating a park ordinance, by riding with his feet on the handles of his bicycle. If Miss Vanderbilt doesn't make haste and marry her Dook, she may have to bail him out of jail.

John Sherman has written a book giving a history of his "Forty Years in Public Life" in which he has created a sensation by bringing charges of bad faith against Garfield, Harrison and other notable men. The principal feature of the book is the claim of the author that he is the father of our present financial system, that has driven $173,000,000 of gold out of the country within the last two years. He is welcome to all the credit he can get out of the "Crime of '73."

The Mason-Foord Company have filed suit at Frankfort against W. M. Finley and other publishers of the Louisville Truth for $50,000 damages, for the publication of an article charging that the Mason-Foord Company paid "a state official" $9,644.29 as his share of the company's dividend in 1892. This is the same libel for which Auditor Norman has brought suit against the Louisville Commercial and for which the latter paper has been indicted.

This item from Louisville shows which way the gamblers are betting on the coming race: "A Republican from Indianapolis left $25 at the Fifth Avenue Hotel office to be placed on Bradley being the next Governor. A half-dozen Democrats wanted it last night. The first one to get there covered it, and wants two or three thousand more in the same way. There is no end to the money which says Hardin will be elected."

The Republicans evidently think Hopkinsville affords a fine field for their line of business. Geo. W. Long, their candidate for treasurer, will speak to-day and next week two of their biggest guns will be fired. On the 28th, Chas. Finley, candidate for secretary of state, holds forth and on the 29th Judge W. H. Holt will make a speech. In spite of all this oratory, just watch Hopkinsville go Democratic.

Campbell is making a great race for governor of Ohio and many well posted politicians claim that he will be a sure winner.

Attention, Members.

The Gun Club will meet at Dr. M. W. Williams' office at 7 p. m. to day. Business of importance and a full attendance is desired.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla adapts itself to the sick and well alike. To the sick it is a sure cure and to the well the best safeguard against sickness. My children were weak and puny. Two of them had catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla cured them after other remedies failed. I, myself, had been dyspeptic for twenty years and sought relief in vain. I resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla and have been built up in health. It cured my stomach trouble and my weight has increased from 112 to 140 pounds. Try it ye sufferers from Maine to California and from the North to the Gulf. Hood's Sarsaparilla will do you good." D. P. SMITH, Justice of Peace, Mountain Creek, North Carolina. $1; six for $5.

The Cotton States and International Exposition at Atlanta, which takes rank among the most brilliant fairs ever organized on the American Continent, comes in for conspicuous attention, both pictorial and literary in the November number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. The leading article on this subject is from the authoritative pen of Walter G. Cooper, the energetic chief of the Department of Publicity and promotion. Among the notable short stories is "The Railway Signal," by the famous Russian writer, Garshin. The frontispiece is an admirable reproduction in water colors of a characteristic "The New England Thanksgiving Dinner." Altogether, the improved Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly is a brilliant success.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. HORNETS GUARD NESTS.

Queer Friendships Between Them and the Marsh Wrens.

Why a colony of Birds Is Rapidly Increasing in Number in the Salt Meadows at the Mouth of the Housatonic River.

On the broad, brown salt meadows that skirt the Housatonic river just above its mouth is a vast colony of marsh wrens. In the acre of tangled tules and cat tails they have built nests innumerable, prettily woven affairs of reed and cat-tail leaves. The nests, which are as large as one's head, are so compactly constructed and so thoroughly thatched as to be entirely weather-tight. As a rule, the thrifty little chattering wrens prefer not to occupy a last-year's nest, so there are every season hundreds of empty ones. They are not allowed to remain vacant long, however, for there are too many creatures seeking just such snug shelters. On the broad, brown salt meadows mice take possession of a great many of them, and the old mice can be seen at all times of the day nimbly running up and down the reeds, coming to and going from their cozy homes. Like most squatters, they are not the most desirable settlers, and, sad to say, frequently repay their open-hearted landlords by eating all the pink eggs in the near-by wrens' nests. If caught in the act, a dozen of the excited birds will organize a vigilance committee, trail the thief to his home and drive him and his family from the nest, tearing it to pieces to prevent any return.

Big spiders, too, love to nest in the abandoned basket-like abodes, and live for many seasons in them.

The most desirable tenants of all are the big black and white hornets. By far the greater number of the old nests are inhabited by these fiery fellows, and, odd to relate, they are the best of friends with the landlords. As if by agreement with the wrens, they keep a perpetual guard over the new nests, as well as those where they live. Let a dog, an unconscious rail or snipe shooter, a bird-egging boy, or any creature whatever approach the nest within a few yards, and, suddenly, without warning, a cohort of winged warriors will fall on the intruder, and flight is the only safe course. To fight would mean death, for the hornets would soon be reinforced by other nestfuls until they would cover the victim and sting him to death.

The wrens seem fully conscious of the value of such sentinels, for they take care to build their new nests always very near to the old. The birds are themselves entirely defenseless, and, their nests being easily located on account of size and the noise made by the wrens, they have in some localities been entirely wiped out by egg-collectors. The boys have learned to give this colony a wide berth, however, and the Housatonic marsh wrens are fast increasing in numbers, and, unless the hornets shift their quarters, are likely to sing happily there in the reeds and raise many a brood of young in years to come.—N. A New Mania.

We have been quite oppressed by men who would cut off the floating tresses of young girls; we also have suffered from a maniac who could not resist squirting ink on the gowns of passing women, and last year a man with a sharp pair of scissors used to slash pieces out of anyone's coat or skirt that came within his radius. This last person was sent to a madhouse, whence he ought not to have been released, but, being pronounced cured, he was launched upon an unsuspecting community again, and profited by his liberty to use his scissors once more. He accosted a lad in a deserted street, and asked him to write down an address, and profited by his occupation to neatly slice off the lobes of both the poor boy's ears, and then ran away. This interesting lunatic, whose name is Maire, will now go into permanent confinement; but the youth's ears are permanently disfigured, to his great anguish of mind.

Italy's Grand Old Man.

Francesco Crispi, who is now in his seventy-fifth year, even in looks, is anything but an old man. Energetic, restless by temperament, he leads a wonderfully active life, seldom leaving the Italian capital, even when the heat of the Roman summer drives every one else to the seaside or the mountains. Crispi works all the time, sleeps little, eats less, and does not drink or smoke. Instead of indulging in copious libations of beer, like Prince Bismarck, or even of his native wine, Crispi drinks nothing stronger than milk, of which he consumes about three litres a day.

WORTHY YOUR CONFIDENCE.

The success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in conquering scrofula in whatever way it may manifest itself is vouched for by thousands who were severely afflicted by this prevalent disease, but who now rejoice over a permanent cure by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Scrofula may appear as a humor, or it may attack the glands of the neck, or break out in dreadful running sores on the body or limbs. Attacking the mucous membrane, it may develop into catarrh or lodging in the lungs lead to consumption. Come as it may, a faithful course of treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla will overcome it, for working upon the foundation of all diseases, impure blood, the system is clarified and vitalized, and vigor, strength and health restored to the body.

The November Forum.

The leading article in the November number of the Forum will be a discussion of the third-term question by Professor John Bach McMaster, the historian, entitled "The Third-term Tradition." Mr. McMaster cites the well-known historical precedents against a Presidential third term, and thinks there is no reason to believe that the old time antipathy to a third term is one whit less stronger than it ever was. Mr. McMaster says that while our practice of choosing Presidents, not because of their fitness, but because of their availability, is in theory all wrong, in practice no harm comes from it; for under our form of government we do not need a President of extraordinary ability the average man is good enough, and for him two terms is ample. What we want, in Mr. McMaster's opinion, is a strong government of the people by the people, not a government of the people by a strong man, and we ought not to tolerate anything which has even the semblance of hereditary. Mr. McMaster counsels the advocates of a third term for Mr. Cleveland to remember the doctrine of the illustrious founder of their party that "in no office can rotation be more expedient."
